Popular brands appearing next to Climate Change Denial disinformation
GDI has studied a selection of popular brand ads appearing on sites spreading climate change disinformation.

Conspiracy theories include:
- Falsification of clean energy efforts through Globalist “Planetary Emergency Plan”
- Human caused fires in Australia “Not Climate Change”
- Climate Change isn’t real.
Popular brands funding these stories:
Ad tech serving these ads & funding these stories:

Google  Quantcast

BEESWAX
Club Of Rome: Planetary Emergency Plan Declared

AUGUST 20, 2020

Club of Rome was originally founded at a meeting in David Rockefeller’s house in Bellagio, Italy, and promoted alarmism over population growth. By 1972, this alarmism was hardly considered new, connected with the creation of the Trilateral Commission, also by Rockefeller. They are still at it. This text is taken from the Club of Rome’s report, Planetary Emergency Plan: Securing a New Deal for People, Nature and Climate.

In that the Great Pandemic of 2020 has not nearly ended that radical climate change agenda, it is time to step back and realize how the panic generated by the panic thus far has done far more for those who seek to take political advantage of the crisis than the people themselves who have been swindled.

FEMA is Hiring Near You. Take Home up to $2812 per Paycheck
McDonalds ad delivered by Google
Environmentalists Caused Australia’s Fires, Not ‘Climate Change’

Is this kind of conflagration too convenient to ever try to prevent, insofar as it generates righteous “Thunbergian” green thunder across the world, solving nothing, but further empowering the bureaucrats?

By Edward Ring • January 14, 2020
From Congress To Climate, It Was A Week Of Frauds And Liars
Environmentalists Caused Australia’s Fires, Not ‘Climate Change’

Is this kind of conflagration too convenient to ever try to prevent, insofar as it generates righteous “Thunbergian” green thunder across the world, solving nothing, but further empowering the bureaucrats?

By Edward Ring • January 14, 2020
‘Dress rehearsal’? Climate activists say tackle climate ‘crisis’ with vigor of pandemic

Read the Full Article

In a special report released Tuesday, Climate Depot’s Marc Morano warned that climate activists view the coronavirus crisis as a “dress rehearsal for the climate emergency.”

He pointed out that many of the movement’s goals — reduced air travel, driving and manufacturing — have been achieved by lockdowns to slow transmissions of the coronavirus. “One thing Greta and all the other climate activists know is that their alleged ‘solutions’ to climate change require many of the massive expansions of governmental power that is occurring under the virus lockdowns,” Mr. Morano said.

By: Marc Morano - Climate Depot  April 23, 2020 12:55 PM

By Valerie Richardson – The Washington Times

The World Meteorological Organization said Wednesday that the pandemic shutdown is expected to reduce greenhouse gas emissions this year by 6%, the biggest one-year decline since World War II and a decrease in line with a recommendation from the U.N. Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

“This is roughly the same pace that the IPCC says we need to sustain every year until 2030 to be on pace to limit global warming to 1.5°C and hit the Paris climate goals,” tweeted meteorologist and climate activist Eric Holthaus. “This is what ‘far-reaching and unprecedented changes in all aspects of society’ looks like.”

https://www.beeswax.com/privacy_summary.html
Dress rehearsal? Climate activists say tackle climate ‘crisis’ with vigor of pandemic

By Marc Morano - Climate Depot
April 29, 2020 2:09 PM

In a special report released Tuesday, Climate Depot’s Marc Morano warned that climate activists view the coronavirus crisis as a "dress rehearsal for the climate emergency." He pointed out that many of the movement’s goals — reduced air travel, driving and manufacturing — have been achieved by lockdowns to slow transmissions of the virus. “One thing Greta and all the other climate activists know is that their alleged ‘crisis’ doesn’t require any of the massive expansions of government power that is occurring under the virus lockdown,” Mr. Morano said.

Climate activists argue such a transition should be planned well in advance to avoid the sudden shock of the pandemic. “What we need isn’t a rapid, unplanned revolution to create a pandemic. It’s doomsday — it’s abandoning the concept of growth entirely. It’s prioritizing life, health, happiness above money,” Mr. Holthaus tweeted. “On a finite planet, growth and change is dangerous, but timely change is necessary.”

Bill McKibben, founder of the climate group 350.org, said the "climate crisis" and the "public health crisis" have taught us that "we have a choice to make now, and it’s a choice between survival and extinction." The lockdowns have slowed the air, but the crisis also has taken hold in the climate system. "Like other political causes, climate change has been pushed to the back burner as the world struggled to contain a disease that has killed more than 250,000 people in just a few months," he said.

"Unprecedented wake-up call"  "The impact of the coronavirus has been immediate and enormous, and that means action, deep emergency, the climate solution before the moment of crisis," Mr. Galatias said. "Climate solutions are already part of the solution." Numerous articles have referred to "fighting the climate crisis" as a "triple win" or "triple solution." "We need to act now to protect our planet from the economic and social impact of climate change," he added. "The lockdowns are highlighting the benefits of reducing air pollution and noise coming from power plants, which can in turn slow the spread of the virus." "The lockdowns have freed the air, and that’s a good thing," he said.

"Sustainable, affordable and clean energy solutions from Pope Francis to World Bank to UN are all focused on reducing the intensity of COVID-19. The Pope has put his weight behind "renewable energy" in the fight against COVID-19, he said. "Some climate activists have called for investing in renewable energy projects to reduce dependence on fossil fuels, helping to slow the spread of the virus.""}

I'm of a certain age and can remember when the looming climate crisis was supposed to have us all freezing to death and being buried in the ice until invading intergalactic aliens discover our fossils millennia from now.

Then, of course, the climate scare was all about Earth having, as Al Gore so infamously put it, "a fever" and being on the brink of boiling to death. In the fourteen years since Gore's Inconvenient Truth made that claim, "global warning" has become "climate change," largely because the alarmists keep being wrong about everything and they needed a malleable catch-all phrase to better market their snake oil.

As has been written by me and many others, the climate change hoax movement has become the secular Left's religion. It does not tolerate heretics. The Climate Church imposes its will on academia by controlling the grant money purse, effectively purging dissent.

It's a heckuva racket, I will grudgingly admit.

Those who go against the grain and dispute any of the accepted climate teaching are branded "anti-science," even though "climate science" has more to do with a bunch of computer models.
George Soros Gave Radical Environmentalists Behind “Global Climate Strike” More Than $24 Million
For More Information:

info@disinformation.org
www.disinformationindex.org