Popular Brands Appearing Next To Voter Suppression Disinformation
GDI has studied a selection of popular brand ads appearing on disinformation sites.

Disinformation narratives tracked in this deck include:

- Corporations have embraced “liberal” and “leftist” anti-election agenda.
- New electoral laws are to ensure “electoral integrity”.
- Liberal response to laws is “race-baiting”.
- Voting rules are to stop “documented 2020 voting abuses” and “chaos”.
Popular brands funding these stories:
Ad tech serving these ads & funding these stories:

Google
Akamai
infolinks
EVIDON
Coca-Cola wants to 'find common ground' after declaring that conservative policies are unacceptable

by Zachary Faria, Commentary

Planned Parenthood is trying to exploit the COVID-19 crisis to rake in more taxpayer funding.

The Left’s empty climate symbolism may give China a huge economic advantage.

Democrats’ HR 1 won’t restore election integrity. Here’s what will.

George W. Bush says Condoleezza Rice was his write-in choice for president in 2020.

Coca-Cola is trying to pretend it cares about bringing people together after attacking conservatives about Georgia’s new voting law. Its newly discovered bipartisanship is a fraud, given that it bent the knee to angry progressives pressuring it to comment.

“We believe the best way to make progress now is for everyone to come together to listen, respectfully share concerns and collaborate on a path forward. We remain open to productive conversations with advocacy groups and lawmakers who may have differing views,” the company told the Washington Examiner. “It’s time to find common ground. In the end, we all want the same thing – free and fair elections, the cornerstone of our democracy.”

Except that entire statement is a lie. Coca-Cola CEO James Quincey completely ignored the actual facts around Georgia’s bill, which expanded opportunities for voters in the state, choosing instead to join the Democratic Party’s fact-free assault on Georgia Republicans. Quincey called the bill a “step backward” and said it was “unacceptable.” Now, the company wants to make up with conservatives after lashing out at them first.
Coca-Cola is trying to pretend it cares about bringing people together after attacking conservatives about Georgia’s new voting law. Its newly discovered bipartisanship is a fraud, given that it bent the knee to angry progressives pressuring it to comment.

“We believe the best way to make progress now is for everyone to come together to listen, respectfully share concerns and collaborate on a path forward. We remain open to productive conversations with advocacy groups and lawmakers who may have differing views,” the company told the Washington Examiner. “It’s time to find common ground. In the end, we all want the same thing – free and fair elections, the cornerstone of our democracy.”

Except that entire statement is a lie. Coca-Cola CEO James Quincey completely ignored the actual facts around Georgia’s bill, which expanded opportunities for voters in the state, choosing instead to join the Democratic Party’s fact-free assault on Georgia Republicans. Quincey called the bill a “step backward” and said it was...
New Glasses Takes US by Storm

Scott cautioned that the companies would feel the sting of GOP opposition should the party be successful in retaking Congress from Democrats.

“There is a massive backlash coming,” he said. “You will rue the day when it hits you. That day is November 8, 2022. That is the day Republicans will take back the Senate and the House. It will be a day of reckoning.”

Scott said that the GOP would make corporate welfare “a thing of the past” and asserted that “no amounts of donations” could save the businesses from that fate.

“There will be nowhere for you to hide,” he wrote. “It turns out that power does corrupt, and you have become corrupt.”

Dozens of Republican-led bills across the country are being considered to change the way elections are conducted after the chaotic fallout from the 2020 presidential election. Corporations have felt pressure from liberal activists to push back on those pieces of legislation, although some companies are already suffering blowback from the GOP.

Coca-Cola, whose CEO tore into the Georgia voting bill, appeared to backtrack and strike a conciliatory tone after former President Donald Trump and other GOP political figures called for conservatives to boycott the soft drink giant. Coke and Delta Air Lines, both based in Georgia, were noticeably absent from last week’s corporate statement.

“We believe the best way to make progress now is for everyone to come together to listen, respectfully share concerns and collaborate on a path forward,” Coca-Cola

https://adsettings.google.com/whythistad?reasons=AlB3aG0EAAJyyWQt6W12Gj0wWzQ3XVoW2t6b0wsmh0dObZGwvZ29vZ2xifWlztLmcuZ0U1YmxY2S2ubmU0J3l3CC9jZGn9mcFJdOlJlbB_Y
Rick Scott warns of 'massive backlash' for corporations over political activism

by Zachary Halaschak, Economics Reporter | April 19, 2021 12:49 PM
Voter identification laws are always racist, except when they’re not.

That’s what failed Democratic gubernatorial candidate and voter rights advocate Stacey Abrams was cornered into concluding after GOP senators picked apart her testimony during a hearing about Georgia’s recently passed election law, Fox News reported.

The legislation being scrutinized was enacted to secure the election process by preventing ballot harvesting and requiring voter ID to request and cast absentee ballots, along with other minor provisions.
However, it quickly became a cause celebre for politicians and major corporations, and even prompted Major League Baseball to move its 2021 All-Star game out of the Peach State.

The left mobilized with claims of racist intent, somehow uncovering secret racism so well-hidden within a mundane law.

TRENDING: Psaki Explodes on Fox News Reporter, Struggles to Answer Simple Immigration Questions

President Joe Biden was the worst race-baiter when he said the law “makes Jim Crow look like Jim Eagle” in a March news conference.

The die had been cast for Senate Bill 202, and opponents have gone all-in on claims Georgia passed a racist voter suppression law.
Georgia Gov. Brian Kemp (R) has signed an election bill that would strengthen voting rules in the Peach State by limiting the number of ballot drop boxes and establishing photo ID requirements for absentee voters, among other things.

The legislation, Senate Bill 202, was passed along party lines by Georgia’s General Assembly with votes of 100-75 in the House and 34-20 in the Senate. It aims to enhance voting rules to ensure more fair and safe elections.

As reported by the Hill, the bill will “require voters to provide a driver’s license or state-issued ID card number to request and submit absentee ballots, and it would curtail the use of ballot drop boxes, limiting their placement to early-voting locations and making them accessible only while the precinct is open.”

The bill also gives the Georgia State Elections Board the ability to take over county election boards in areas that may require oversight. Georgia’s Secretary of State, currently held by Brad Raffensperger, would also be removed as chair of the State Elections Board.
Corporate Leftists Moving to Strip Georgia of MLB All-Star Game Over Election Integrity Laws

Richard Moorhead
Mar 28, 2021
Florida’s Governor Ron DeSantis Moving to Ban Universal Mail-in Voting in Election Integrity

Richard Moorhead
Feb 20, 2021

Click to find out more about a new promotion
Don’t miss this content from our sponsor

It’s Time to Name Antifa a Terror Org!
Sign Your Petition Now!
DeSantis’ proposal wouldn’t eliminate mail-in voting in Florida. It would merely require every voter who wishes to vote by mail to request a mail-in ballot every election, as opposed to mailing millions of ballots without verifying addresses and identities.

Under the package, only someone’s family member could drop off their ballot, in a move designed to prevent suspect political front groups from “harvesting” ballots. This would establish a clear chain of custody from the voter to the state without unnecessary third parties.

The comprehensive package would also require counties and municipalities to make election results public and transparent in timely fashion.

This package should be copied by every governor in the United States in order to safeguard elections at every level of government.
Florida Governor Ron DeSantis announced a new election integrity reform package to safeguard his state’s elections on Friday. The set of reforms would do away with unsolicited mail-in voting, crack down on insecure ballot drop boxes, and ban ballot harvesting in Florida.

Today, I’m excited to announce new initiatives to ensure that Florida remains a leader on key issues regarding our electoral process, such as ballot integrity, public access to election information, transparency of election reporting and more.

Announcement in West Palm Beach - 2.19.21
youtube.com

5:38 PM - Feb 19, 2021
5.9K 546 Copy link to Tweet
Fourth, white Southerners continued to this day to see Johnson, Jimmy Carter, Bill Clinton, Al Gore, and many Southern states have voted for Democrats as a return to the principles. If the principles of the Declaration are the reason not to pursue racist policies. The America Jim Crow is that we have often failed to live up to Americans of good will—including many white Southerners—American practice into line with American principles.

Which brings us back to elections. Elections are the lifeblood of a self-governing people. Accordingly, the integrity of the electoral process is of critical importance. People who persist in comparing Georgia's efforts to ensure the integrity of the electoral process to Jim Crow—an evil, unconstitutional, and inhumane monstrosity—are engaged in slander, pure and simple.
To compare Georgia’s law, which seeks to achieve election integrity, to the dark period of Jim Crow is an abomination, pure and simple. It is a smear and a libel, not worthy of a reasonable person. But yet we have presumably respectable people, including the current occupant of the White House, making that claim.

The ludicrous claim that Republicans in Georgia want to reinstate Jim Crow is part of a broader false narrative. It acknowledges the racist past of the Democratic Party and its role in defending slavery and Jim Crow, even the racism of the Progressives like Woodrow Wilson. But, goes the argument, the parties subsequently changed places. The Republicans adopted a “Southern strategy,” which sought to appeal to the racism of white Southerners. Thus the
‘Terrified Of The American Left’: Brit Hume Slams Corporations For ‘Lying To Themselves’ In Attacking Georgia Voting Law
Fox News senior political analyst Brit Hume said Tuesday that corporations are lining up against the Georgia voting law because they are "terrified of the American left."

"I think right now, a lot of American corporations are terrified of the American left and now that the Biden administration is in, they see the drift and the direction it's taking which is basically to enact the main points of the left's agenda, they want to try to get in good with them," Hume told Fox News' "Tucker Carlson Tonight."

‘Terrified Of The American Left’: Brit Hume Slams Corporations For ‘Lying To Themselves’ In Attacking Georgia Voting Law
For More Information:

info@disinformation.org
www.disinformationindex.org